The man who says confidently that the Lord will not be so severe upon us as to exact the full measure of our punishment for our transgressions does not deserve to be argued with. It is not what people think the Lord will do; it is what the Lord has said he would do.

CROWLEY NOT REINSTATED.

Sweeping Order Is Issued Against the Priest.

I could never understand how Protestant people who read the Bible so much do not fully comprehend the sub-ject of indulgences as to the remission of sin in the Catholic church. They seem to think or pretend to believe that olle church is very lax, and all you have to do is to commit sin and then get indulgences. That is false. The Lord says that the sinner must be held until the last farthing of the penalty shall be paid. Hence, we believe in a middle state, or purgatory, and I have observed that many Episcopalians are now praying for the dead after having abandoned that doctrine. I am glad that it is so. ### Religious Reception at Nazareth Con-

At 2:30 o'clock the sweet-toned convent bell called all to the sanctuary, and in a few moments every seat was miled. Many eyes were dim with tears as parents, brothers or sisters remembered that their dear one would, in a sense, be parted from them forevercase, be parted from them forever-nore, but all wore a look of holy res-and of an agretable disposition. The mission of the sisterhood is an ardu-ous one, and the candidates must carry the cross of trials. In addition to teaching parish schools, the sisters visit the sick and dying and take charge of works of charity in general.

seem to think or pretend to believe that indulgehees mean remission of past and presents sins and permission to commit more, because they are already forgiven by the indulgences. They say the word signifies that, to indulge. This theory is held by people of education, and that fact is amazing in itself. Indulgences do not apply to guilt, but to the penalty that attaches to guilt. We are often told that the Catholic church is very lax, and all you have to do is to commit sin and then get indulgences. That is false. The Lord says that the sinner must be held

A Strange Conversion:

The story of a remarkable conversion is told in the Missionary Record of the Oblates of Mary for the current month, by a priest who signs himself "L. C. P. P." It occurred many years ago in Dublin, when the name of the process of the proc leve in purgatory.

The Catholics are the only ones who strictly after to the teaching of the Bible in this matter. The principle of indulgences is very clear. Now, as to the declared sale of indulgences, that is another calumny against us. An essential part of the efficacy of indulgences is repeatance for sin, and if there is no sorrow nothing else can absolve the guilt and the penalty.

Dublin, when the narrator was attracted by the gathering of a crowd in the declared sale of the principle of indulgences is very clear. Now, as to include the was a gentlem in a fit. It was evident from his style of the efficacy of indulgences is repeatance for sin, and if there is no sorrow nothing else can absolve the guilt and the penalty.

ST. PATRICK A PROTESTANT.

Methodist Parson Essays to Steal Our Saint.

Methodist Parson Essays to Steal Our Saint.

The Rev. Dr. Rees, pastor of the Smithfield Methodist Episcopal church, preached a sermon on Sunday night in which he tried to prove that St. Patrick was a Protestant.

As St. Patrick was a gentleman, a scholar, an apostle and a suint, it is scholar, an apostle and a suint, it is scholar, an apostle and a suint, it is scholar, an apostle and a will will be dependent and would say to every person wilfully and wickedly in the Methodist sect. 'I know you not.''

The scholarship of Dr. Rees may be guessed by two of his assertions, namely, first, that St. Patrick's father was named Hilderbrand and that he was a decoun, and, second, that the dectrined of transubstantiation was not a dogma of faith in St. Patrick's father was biguited some converts by immersion, proves nothing of the proper in the protection of the proper in the particles of the protection of the proper in the particles of the protection of the particles of the protection of the pr he had never once been troubled in that way since I had done something to him as he lay on the ground in Sackville street."—London Tablet.

What a Catholic Must Believe,

By the principles of the Catholic thurch no one is bound to believe any-God has revealed. If God has revealed a church no one is bound to believe anyGod has revealed. If God has revealed a thing as an article of faith except what certain truth, that truth must be immutable. No discovery in science, no progress in knowledge, no improvement in society can make that which God has revealed case to be the truth.

It must continue to be the doctrine of the church, immutable, irreformable to the end of the world.

The denial of a doctrine defined constitutes the loss of faith and a separation from the church of God. There are many topics in some measure connected with religion upon which we have no divine revelation; these topics can be freely discussed, for Catholies believe that no power but that established by God himself can command the submission of the human intellect; and if it should so happen that a doubt existed as to whether any reveiation was made upon certain topics during the inquiry, and until the discovery of satisfactory evidence, the church does not interfere with the adoption or relection of such an ording

but she does tolerate difference of opin-ion where defined dogmas are not con-cerned.—Rev. J. F. Mullaney, LL. D., in Donahoe's.

Being requested a few years ago to give a decision upon the question: "Should a Christian burial be given to suicides?" the sacred congregation of fites first called attention to the general law observed in such cases, which decrees that Christian burial cannot be granted to those who kill themselves through despair or anger thot madness; ob desperationem vel tracudiam, if before death they have not given signs of repentance; and to this the following
